News briefs

Post-UCI party today

The post-UCI party is today, 2-4 p.m. in the Air Base 4 South Hangar. Wing leaders encourage all Team Lajes members to come out and enjoy the food and camaraderie at the alternate duty location. A shuttle will run from the commissary from 1-2 p.m., and from 4-5 p.m. Some parking is also available at the AB4 North Hangar.

PA's VHS service ends

Due to a reduction in manpower, public affairs will no longer transfer AFN recordings to video tapes. Anyone interested in recording AFN broadcasts are encouraged to use their VHS recorders at home. Customers can get broadcast air times from AFN by calling 2-3496.

Credit union closure, changes

Pentagon Federal Credit Union will be closed Thursday, but the automatic teller machine will be working.

PFCU will change telephone numbers Monday. The new numbers are 295-513-221 and 295-513-3223.

SGLI goes up for everyone

There's a change to the information reported in last week's Crossroads involving the procedures for the Servicemembers Group Life Insurance benefit increase.

SGLI benefits will increase to $250,000, April 1, for all servicemembers -- regardless of the amount of their current coverage, or even if they don't have any coverage. Any member who doesn't want the increase must go to the military personnel flight customer service before April 20, to change their coverage. Anyone who changes coverage Monday-April 20 will be billed for full coverage for April.

Thrift savings opens to military

WASHINGTON — Servicemembers can begin to sign up for the Thrift Savings Plan beginning Oct. 9, Defense Department officials said.

TSP is a retirement and investment plan that has been available to civilian government workers since 1987. Congress extended the plan to servicemembers.

The open season for signing up will run from Oct. 9 to Dec. 8. Deductions will start in January 2002. In 2002, servicemembers can contribute up to 7 percent of their basic pay. That limit of 7 percent of basic pay will rise to 10 percent by 2005 and become unlimited in 2006.

Troops will be able to contribute all or a percentage of any special pay, incentive pay, or bonus pay they receive.

The total amount generally can't exceed $10,500 for the year. Contributions from pay earned in a combat zone will not count against the $10,500 ceiling. Combat zone contributions will be subject to a different limitation, however, 25 percent of pay or $35,000, whichever is less.

Like civilians, members will choose how they want to invest their money.

Servicemembers will be able to start, change or reallocate TSP contributions during two open seasons held each year, in November to January and May to July.

Because bonuses are hard to predict, officials said those already participating in the plan and contributing from basic pay and who receive, for example, a reenlistment bonus, can elect to contribute at any time.

Contributions come from "pre-tax" dollars. Servicemembers will pay no federal or state income taxes on contributions or earnings until they're withdrawn.

Teams will visit bases with more details. Until then, members can visit www.tsp.gov/uniserv/index.html.

Red Cross, FSC volunteer programs different

Staff Sgt. Ronald "Beetle" Bailey
Lajes Field-American Red Cross Marketing Director and Volunteer

March was American Red Cross month. What does the ARC do here at Lajes?

The ARC is an independent agency that operates, among other things, to support American military members worldwide.

The primary ARC mission for the military is the Armed Forces Emergency Services -- delivering emergency messages to and from servicemembers and their families.

Another Red Cross mission, especially here at Lajes, is to manage resources for the volunteer program.

Many folks are confused about the Family Support Center Volunteer Program and the ARC Volunteer Program.

In the spirit of cooperation, the two agencies have formed a partnership to handle the Lajes volunteer program with a division of responsibility spelled out in their Memorandum of Understanding.

I can't cover FSC's program -- for FSC information, call Kitty Taylor at 2-6303. However, I'd like to explain the programs specific to the ARC.

The ARC manages the volunteer program for the medical group, a mandatory program spelled out in Air Force Instruction, Department of Defense Dependent Schools and the ARC office.

Volunteering is easy. Simply stop by the Cardio pulmonary resuscitation classes are available through the Red Cross at least twice a month.

ARC office, Bldg. T-112, e-mail the Red Cross at redcross@lajes.af.mil or call 2-3516.

They'll arrange an orientation and registration program for volunteers before they report to work with the organization.

All volunteer hours will be logged into a special database, beginning at the time of orientation. Monthly updates are done right at the workplace, so reporting volunteer time is hassle free.

Here are a few benefits of volunteering:

— The program helps the base by providing extra help in the work place. This not only enables office workers to provide better service, it saves the unit money as well.

— Volunteers gain work experience. This is a great resume resource, strengthened by the worldwide recognition of the ARC as a professional, humanitarian organization.

— It may lead into a paying position.

— Hours are transferable when the volunteer leaves Lajes. There's an ARC office at every base across the globe and in many communities in the States.

— Along with awards and recognition, the ARC offers additional training to the volunteers at a significantly reduced price.

Do thieves follow core values?

Chaplain (Col.) Richard Johnson
Barksdale Air Force Base chaplain

The Air Force core values of "Integrity First, Service Before Self and Excellence in All We Do" are simple and straightforward. At first glance, they appear to be self-sufficient and stand-alone values.

Actually, the core values are based upon a foundation of moral, ethical and spiritual character.

Without this basis, core values are philosophies -- not a way of life. Without a moral base, core values are only clichés.

It may seem ridiculous, but a thief may be judged to have integrity if he tells you he's going to rob you and then follows through on his word.

Likewise, if a thief has done the robbery in such a way as to ensure a safe getaway and a maximum yield for the robbery, then it can be said he performed the robbery in an excellent way.

It may be said that the thief placed service before self if he is willing to do the robbery for the benefit of a gang or as a modern-day Robin Hood.

These illustrations are repulsive or ridiculous because they violate our sense of human decency. In each of these cases, what is lacking is a higher standard, a moral touchstone, a spiritual base.

The core values of the Air Force are based on this higher standard. One of the greatest crises facing the world today is this loss of ethical, spiritual or transcendent values -- values that go beyond the personal and self-centered approach to life.

Our only hope through this crisis lies in the reestablishment of firm ethical, spiritual or transcendent values.

We need a moral and ethical touchstone. People today are crying out for a society with values like these. The recent popularity of William Bennett's "The Book of Virtues" is encouraging.

Repeatedly polls show Americans trust the military more than any other professional institution. This trust must not be betrayed.

The moral touchstone upon which the Air Force core values are based, affirms that all human life is equally endowed with worth and dignity.

There is no distinction between male or female, black or white, rich or poor, aristocrat or peasant, American or Cambodian, Jew or Arab, old or young; all are created with equal worth, with equal dignity, with equal status and with equal rights.

One of the greatest crises facing the world today is this loss of ethical, spiritual or transcendent values — values that go beyond the personal and self-centered approach to life.

We do live in a global village and we are all responsible for this higher standard. When the great philosopher Thucydides was asked when justice would come to Athens, he replied, "Justice will not come to Athens until those who are not injured are as indignant as those who are injured."

A national advertisement claims "quality goes in before the label goes on." In the Air Force, we must ensure that the ethical standards are internalized and become part of our character before we can really claim to follow the core values.

We must respect the rights and dignity of others. We must create open environments; we must treat people in a fair and just manner. We must take responsibility and accountability for our actions. This behavior is an internal and personal matter.

It is the product of a belief system that informs and supports the core values. It is an ethical bedrock.

As a chaplain, I would be remiss if I did not indicate that this ethical foundation or bedrock is best established in our homes and in our places of worship. These are the centers that cultivate deep and personal moral standards.

If we are to reverse the depersonalized trend in the world today, if the military is to remain trusted and respected, if we are truly to achieve our highest potential, then we must discuss, teach, model, nurture and encourage true character development -- which goes deeper than stated core values. This takes place primarily in homes and places of worship.

We must build our core values upon ethical and spiritual foundations of life. Our families, marriages and professions deserve this -- and so do we.

Four airmen get stripes

Four Lajes airmen will be promoted to the next highest rank in April. They are: Airmen First Class Patricia Shields, 65th Communications Squadron, and CaMecia Bain, 65th Supply Squadron; and Senior Airmen Daniel Sherman, 65th Security Forces Squadron, and Christopher Troy, 65th CS.

CDC high scorers

Three airmen scored above 90 percent on their Career Development Course examinations. They are Senior Airman Keith Scott, 65th Medical Group, 96 percent; Senior Airman Truth Fink, 65th Communications Squadron, 93; and Senior Airman Shawn Kuhns, 65th Operations Support Squadron, 90.

Pharmacy implements Rx policy

Staff Sgt. Beverly Isik
Public affairs

Patients will see a few changes in the way the Lajes pharmacy does business.

To protect patient confidentiality, the pharmacy staff will be enforcing an already established Air Force policy on patient representatives picking up prescriptions, said Capt. Yukli Elliot, 65th Medical Group pharmacy officer.

"This isn't a local pharmacy policy, it's an Air Force-wide directive," she said.

Starting May 1, anyone, other than patient who picks up medication, must have a valid photo identification card, the patient's military ID card or a photocopy of both sides, and a signed statement from the patient authorizing the representative to pick up the prescription.

"People coming from, or who have been stationed in the States in the past two years should already be used to this policy," she said. "They've been strictly enforcing this in the States."

A patient representative must pick up medications for anyone under 18 years old.

If the parent is making the pick up, he or she just needs to show a military ID card. However, the captain said if the person is the legal guardian of the minor child, he or she must have a valid photo ID card and a notarized power of attorney.

card, the minor's military ID card or photocopy of both sides, and a signed statement from the parent or legal guardian.

Customers can pick up preprinted authorization statement cards at the pharmacy during normal hours, 7:30 a.m.-5 p.m., Monday-Friday, except the second Wednesday of each month when the pharmacy is closed for training.

"Patients who already have authorization statement cards from any Department of Defense installation can use it here at Lajes," the captain said. "We want to make this as easy as possible with no interruption. The goal here is to protect patient privacy and confidentiality."

For more information on this policy, call Captain Elliot at 2-3635.

Keep 'em straight

John Bedell, library employee, straightens rows of books. National Library Week runs from Saturday-April 7. To celebrate, the library will have an open house, with refreshments, April 6, 3-5 p.m. Children's story hour will start at 3 p.m. and trivia contests will run throughout the afternoon for children and adults. For more information call the library at 2-3688.

AFCEA subchapter takes root at Lajes

Staff Sgt. Beverly Isik
Public affairs

The Armed Forces Communications-Electronics Association is taking root here at Lajes.

A group of Lajes professionals came together in February to form the Lajes Subchapter of AFCEA, under the United Kingdom-Southern Chapter, said Lt. Col. Mike Lewis, 65th Communications Squadron commander.

Now they're busy making plans for the second meeting to be held April 10.

"We're trying to get the new chapter going, and get people involved and interested in what it's all about," said Master Sgt. Richard Redman, chief of the 65th Air Base Wing Information Assurance Office.

With more than 27,000 individual members and 12,000 corporate associates from government, military and industry, AFCEA represents the professional communications, electronics, intelligence and information systems community.

"In a nutshell, AFCEA provides an opportunity for military and civilian professionals to come together to discuss the use of current and future communications and electronics innovations in the military," said Colonel Lewis, a member since 1984. "It's considered by top decision-makers to be the pre-eminent forum in its field."

With a strong commitment to education, AFCEA officials said the organization provides a broad spectrum of member services including education opportunities and career development services. Scholarships, fellowships, awards and prizes encourage academic excellence in science and engineering at the graduate and undergraduate levels, according to officials.

AFCEA presents more than $750,000 annually in education assistance.

Chapter activities including meetings and luncheons cover the gamut of the communications and electronics career fields through a wide range of guest speakers.

Keynote speaker for the luncheon meeting April 10 is Brig. Gen. Anthony "Bud" Bell, director for command, control, communications and computer systems, U.S. Joint Forces Command, Norfolk Naval Base, Va.

The general will focus on how USJFCOM is leading the transformation of the Armed Forces in the C4 realm, Colonel Lewis said.

Brig. Gen. Anthony "Bud" Bell

February's keynote speaker was 8th Air Force Director of Communications and Information, Col. Ted Campbell.

Colonel Campbell discussed Air Force communicators' roles in supporting operators, like pilots and commanders, who perform core Air Force missions.

"He elaborated on the ever-evolving role of Air Operations Centers deployed in forward operating areas and emphasized the advantages of using information operations in exploiting an enemy's decision process to disrupt his command and control capabilities," Colonel Lewis said.

He also talked about communicators' evolving roles as operators in areas like information operations, computer network defense and computer network attack.

"With the Air Force Chief of Staff's latest Note to Airmen, NOTAM 01-02, focusing on the Developing Aerospace Leaders program, airmen from all functional areas are encouraged to come out and broaden their perspective of what our Air Force is all about -- this opportunity focusing on the C4 arena," Colonel Lewis said.

There's a lot of benefits to becoming an AFCEA member, including networking opportunities, Sergeant Redman said.

"It's a chance to see a different side of communications, to see the bigger picture," he said. "AFCEA also provides a lot of opportunities to grow professionally and set yourself up for a job when you leave the military."

All Team Lajes members are invited to attend the luncheon April 10 at 11:15 a.m. in the Top of the Rock Club. Call Sergeant Redman at 2-2232 before 5 p.m. Thursday.

AFCEA benefits
